C unt de Cournulier, the head of ore of the noblest families in France, on Saturday afternoon surprised his wife. the Countess de Cournulier, visiting the spartments of a gentleman on the Rue de Provence in Paris. The Count met the Countess on the stairway and fired three shots at her, two of which took effect. She died on her way to a hospital. The Count was arrested and put in prison. The Count's brother is an army colonel, and the Count is well known in the highest Parisian society. He is 43 years of age. His wife was 31 years old. She was formerly Mile. She obtained a decree, which was confirmed by the courts on appeal last August. The count hoped to obtain the custody of the children, with a large allowance from his wife's estate, but being frus-trated in this he became enraged, and this induced the murder.

Count Pineau de Viennay, father of the Countess de Cornulier, also denies that there was any impropriety in the relations between his daughter and M. Leroux, her lawver.

GHOST WORKS IN A COTTON MILL .-The night watchman of the Queen City Cotton Mill, at Burlington, Vt., has reported the nightly appearance of a ghost. A year ago a young woman employe of the mill was killed by a train, and it is asserted that it is her "spook" that appears. The watchman claims to have found six looms running without motive power and the cloth being woven without visible guidance. Later in the night he saw a white figure walking back and forth in the working room, which disappeare is he attempted to approach it. He reported the matter to the mill authorities and was ridiculed. Then be induced a few of his friends to stay with him at the mill the next night. They also saw the spectacle, and are now firm believers in the ghost. Every night since then visitors to the mill have witnessed the same sight. Each night as the train nears the spot where he girl was killed a white figure is seen. When the train strikes the spot the headlight goes out and does no light again until the spot is passed.

Children, he said, are especially liable to impregnation. At a village in New Guinea, 137 inhab itants out of 700 were affected by the disease, and all were cured by the use of quinine. Mosquito nets, the professor said, were useful, but not wholly reliable. All incoulations, he said, had hitherto been failures, and therefore he urged the colonial authorities to issue a free supply of quinine,
